Professor Rosi Braidotti Free Public Lecture

Inhabiting Posthuman Climates: Ecologies of Change

In an era of climate destruction, rethinking the ways that we inhabit posthuman climates has become an urgent task.

In this public lecture, pre-eminent scholar Professor Rosi Braidotti will draw on her recent work on posthuman knowledge and ecologies of change to present a positive, vitalist approach to living with climate change and trying to reverse the effects of the anthropocene.

Rosi's talk is hosted by the School of Media and Communication and the School of Art at RMIT. She is a visiting professor for the month of February at the Digital Ethnography Research Centre (DERC) and Contemporary Art and Social Transformation (CAST).
